If the scheme be carried out New York will have the boss skyscraper of the world. An English syndicate is talking of erecting a building to cover an area of 300 feet, fifty stories or 700 feet high, to cost from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000. To give it ground grip it is proposed to make the foundation fifty feet deep running into the solid rock. What a daisy place the roof would be for the boys to fly kites.

A Havana letter says that Gen. Weyler has consented to release Gen. Rivera on condition that he remain outside of the dominion of Spain, a condition which Rivera accepts. In fact he has been trying to get out of the dominion of Spain for some time, and has been doing some pretty hard fighting for it. He is to be released on the 24th inst., and will come to this country.

Hon. W. A. Gladstone attributes his longevity to his habit of taking a daily walk and to giving thirty-two bites to every morsel of food. His stomach has reciprocated the consideration shown to it, by relieving it from the necessity of doing the teeth's work, and has given its possessor very little trouble.

As an evidence of the life preserving qualities of the East Tennessee climate the denizens out there are pointing proudly to Reuben Walker, who has just died at the age of 106, but until a few weeks ago was "able to do hard farm work."

Rev. Parkhurst will sojourn in Europe for the Summer, and when he comes back says he will devote himself exclusively to the pulpit, a commendable resolve which it would be well if some other Northern preachers would adopt.

A syndicate has gobbled up all the coal lands in East Tennessee and Southern Kentucky, except one mine in Kentucky, which the State owns. Even the things under the ground can't escape the Trusts.

Major D. O'Connor and Mrs. O'Connor left last evening on the 7.15 A. C. L. train for an extensive trip. They will go first to Georgetown, D. C., to be present at the commencement exercises of Georgetown University, from which institution their daughter, Miss Male O'Connor, graduates this year. After the commencement is over the three will go on a tour of the North and West, visiting the lakes and stopping over at several of the large cities, Milwaukee and others.

Mrs. S. D. Bradford, of Southport, also left last evening to go to the commencement of Georgetown University, where her daughter is a student.

Struck by Lightning.

During the storm Saturday afternoon the water-tank on an iron platform seventy-five feet high, at the compress of Messrs. Alex. Sprunt & Son, was struck by lightning and a hole knocked in the top and a wooden brace knocked off, but fortunately, as the tank contains 10,000 gallons of water and was very nearly full, no other damage was done. The tank supplies water for the pipes of the automatic sprinklers, which run through the compress. The lightning struck the tank about 4 o'clock.

Are You Going?

The Sunday school of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church will go to Lake Waccamaw on the annual excursion day after to-morrow. The lake is a most desirable place to which to run an excursion, and there will doubtless be a large number who will go.

BURGLARS WERE BUSY.

A NUMBER OF SMALL ROBBERIES LAST SUNDAY.

Several Business Houses and Two Residences Entered—A Safe Opened and Plundered of Its Contents.

The wheel of fortune allotted to Wilmington Sunday eight robberies, which was certainly, to say the least, an unusual occurrence. The chief feature of the different burglaries was the boldness of the participants. The following is the Sabbath day record:

Mr. Jno. W. Plummer, Jr., keeps a confectionery store on Princess street, between Front and Second. During the morning Sunday Mr. T. W. Wood, who occupies part of the store, and Mr. Jno. W. Plummer, Sr., were sitting in the rear of the store—Mr. Plummer reading the morning paper and Mr. Wood sitting at a desk, near an iron safe, writing. Mr. Wood upon finishing writing arose, and after locking the safe, which had a combination lock, departed. In the meantime Mr. Archie McLean, of Lumberton, came in the store, and he and Mr. Plummer engaged in a friendly conversation until 12 45 o'clock, when he and Mr. Plummer took their departure—Mr. Plummer going home to dinner and Mr. McLean going to the Orton, where he was stopping during his stay in the city. Mr. Plummer, before leaving, locked the different doors of the store, but when Mr. Wood returned shortly after 2 o'clock—a little over an hour—he found one of the doors of the store which opens into a back yard and which only could have been opened from the inside, as it fastens by an iron brace, open; the door of the combinations afe was also open, and an iron box, which had been in the safe containing $16.75, taken out of the safe, broken open and robbed of its contents. Investigation showed that entrance had probably been effected by the thief or thieves through a broken window of a rear room connecting with the store. A cold chisel was found near the recently robbed safe, and on the safe three keys, one of which exactly fitted the door of the rear room leading into the back yard. The discovery of the keys made supposition plausible that the thief or thieves effected an entrance through that door, and that the broken window and a supposed barefoot track—which could have been more easily manufactured by other means than a foot—was the work of a cool-headed miscreant. The easy opening of the safe and the utter disregard for $3 in pennies, which were in the safe, go to show that the robbery was either done by an expert or one that had by some hook or crook discovered the combination of the safe which Mr. Wood is almost positive he set, using the one number, or day combination, which if not operated correctly makes the opening of the lock an impossibility without using the entire combination, or resorting to dynamite or something of a like nature. Of the money in the safe $16.49 belonged to Mr. Jno. W. Plummer Jr., and $3.00 to Mr. Wood.

ROBBERY NEXT DOOR.

In connection with the Plummer robbery occurred the breaking into of the real estate office of Mr. W. M. Cumming next door to Mr. Plummer, on the eastern side. Saturday night Mr. W. A. McGowan, head clerk, left the office about 10 o'clock, after seeing that the doors and windows of the office were securely fastened, but Mr. Tom Myers, who also works for Mr. Cumming, happened to go to the office about 3.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, a short while after the discovery of the robbery at Mr. Plummer's, and found that the appearance of Mr. Cumming's office showed decided signs of a recent visit from some thief or thieves. Drawers of the different desks were open and the contents ransacked, but the only thing missing was three keys, which afterwards turned out to be the keys found on the top of Mr. Plummer's safe. A broken pane of glass in a window of the rear office, opening into an alley, seemed to tell the story of the entrance. Although the window-pane was broken the broken glass was on the outside of the window, showing that an expert, assisted by a small boy who could have entered through the hole made, had been at work, or that an entrance to Mr. Cumming's office had been made by means of a false key, and the breaking of the window-pane was only a blind. Luckily for Mr. Cumming, the thief or thieves in their too eager search overlooked five dollars in money which was lying near.

C. W. YATES' STORE ENTERED.

Between noon and 5 o'clock Sunday the book store of Mr. C. W. Yates, on Market street, between Front and Second, was entered from the rear, and two money drawers in the front part of the store broken open, but nothing obtained, as Mr. Yates had taken the precaution to remove the contents upon his departure from the store at noon. The intruders were evidently not of a literary or artistic turn of mind, as no books, pictures or other articles were missing. An entrance was made by removing without breaking a pane of glass set in the skylight over the back room of the store, which fronts into an alley running from Front to Second street, and then by breaking open a window in the rear part of the store, fastened by means of a wooden bar. A brick wall near the room furnished the means by which the intruders reached the shed of the room. Upon the roof of the room, which was tinned, could be plainly seen the tracks of two barefooted people—one small and one large. The burglary was discovered by a clerk in the store.

MILLINERY ESTABLISHMENT PLUNDERED.

Sunday morning Mrs. Frank Jones, who resides on Dock street, near Second, happened to look out the back way of her residence and saw the windows of Mrs. E. M. Strock's millinery establishment, a large room in the second story of a building on Second street, near Dock, open, and a ladder, which had been in the yard, leaning against the building directly under the open window. Mrs. Jones immediately informed Mrs. Sarah Judge, who is an occupant of the building, of the occurrence. Mrs. Judge sent word to Mrs. Strock, at Eben Piner's, No. 618 Princess street, where Mrs. Strock boards. Upon arriving Mrs. Strock discovered that she, too, had been robbed. A show case, containing a heavy tin money box, was broken open, and the box was missing. The box was, however, found in the yard, with the top cut to pieces, presumably by means of some sharp instrument, and its contents, $3 in money, a note for $60, bearing interest at 8 per cent., a certificate from the defunct First National Bank, a gold bracelet and a gold ring, were missing. Mrs. Strock left her place of business Saturday night about 10 o'clock.

BARBER SHOP ENTERED.

Churchill Moore's barber shop, on Front street, between Market and Dock, was again entered Sunday morning. As of yore the entrance was made through a window, which opened into a backyard. The money drawer was broken open and robbed of its contents—only a five-cent piece with a hole in it. Other drawers were broken open and ransacked. The robbery was discovered Sunday morning about 9 o'clock by James McKathern, colored, a barber in the employ of Moore.

OTHER ROBBERIES.

The country produce store of Adam Brown, colored, at Front street market, was also robbed Sunday morning. A side window of the store, which leads into the entrance of the market house was broken open. The money-drawer was forced open, and a vain attempt to crack the safe was made. The only articles missing are three boxes of cigars and a toy bank containing a small sum of money. The robbery of this place was discovered Sunday morning at 7 o'clock by one of Brown's sons.

The kitchen to the residence of Mr. W. F. Robertson, corner Second and Orange streets, was entered late Saturday night or early Sunday morning, and robbed of a quantity of groceries and a lamp.

A residence in the Southern portion of the city was entered early Sunday morning, and the pantry relieved of most of its contents.

Among those who were granted license was Mr. R. Clinton Bunting, of this city. Dr. Bunting will soon leave to take a post graduate course at Bellevue College. The STAR wishes him success.

Killed a Rattlesnake.

Master Gus Rieger, Jr., 11 years old, son of Capt. A. W. Reiger, who resides on his rice plantation, across the river in Brunswick, while walking in the front yard on Saturday last, observed lying on the grass near his feet a huge rattlesnake, which gave the usual warning. With a cool head and steady nerve Gus returned to the house, procured his father's gun, and dispatched the snake, which measured nearly five feet, and had eleven rattles and a button.

Cape Fear Camp, U. C. V.

The brave old "Confeds" are going to Nashville in fine style. To start with, they will be the finest on the grounds anyway, and then they are going to have the very best equipment as the quality and appearance of the silk banner, which came yesterday, shows beyond question. It is on exhibition at Heinsberger's book store, where numbers of people dropped in to see it yesterday.

The banner was designed by Col. W. J. Woodward and bespeaks no small degree of taste. It is mounted on an elegant staff with gold fringe and tassels and bears the words "Cape Fear Camp No. 354. North Carolina Division N. C. V. Tar Heels. First at Bethel, 1861. Last at Appomattox, 1865."

In the centre the North Carolina State seal appears.

Mr. Jesse Wilder, of Company C, Fourth N. C. Cavalry, has been chosen color-bearer.

The flag for use over general headquarters, is also on exhibition at Mr. Heinsberger's.

The Weather Again.

Occasionally the weather forms more than usually the subject of conversation. Such was particularly the case yesterday and Sunday. The mercury climbed as high as 99 Sunday, and yesterday it played around the nineties again until two o'clock, when a breeze from the ocean brought a measure of relief.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE

NEW OFFICERS TAKE CHARGE OF THE DEPARTMENT.

Base Ball at Raleigh—Gov. Russell's Reasons for Pardoning 3a Convict Sentenced to the Penitentiary for Manslaughter.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C. June 14.

The executive committee of the Board of Agriculture meets this afternoon, and to-morrow the Board meets. This morning the new officers elected by the Board at its last meeting took charge of the department. All the men are new and untried, succeeding officials who have had years of service and who have made the station one of the best in the country. The retirement of Mr. T. K Bruner from the department is a loss to the State. The handbook recently issued by the department was gotten up by Mr. Bruner. It is a great piece of work and of immense value to the State.

The Henderson and Raleigh base ball teams crossed bats to-day. The teams are composed largely of members of college teams of North Carolina and Virginia. Next week the colored base ball nine from Washington, D C, will play the Nationals of this city.

Governor Russell will be absent from the capital all the week. He left yesterday, accompanied by Mrs. Russell, for Southern Pines. After spending a couple of days there, Governor and Mrs. Russell will go to their summer home at Ocean View, and remain until the end of the week.

It is intimated that Judge Purnell will appoint J. B. Fortune clerk of the court here July 1st. The fiscal year ends June 31st in the department, and Fortune will be given a clear start.

Carroll H. Smith has resigned as the general agent of the Seaboard Air Line.

Gov. Russell pardons Addison Amerson, convicted of manslaughter in 1893 at the Fall term of Wilson Superior Court. Amerson was sentenced to seven years imprisonment. In granting the pardon the Governor assigns the following reasons:

"I am satisfied from information in this case that this prisoner was guilty of nothing more than manslaughter, committed under circumstances of great provocation. The deceased was the aggressor and threatened to beat him and attempted to grossly humiliate him. Any man of spirit would have resented the insults. The case is one of technical manslaughter done in the briefest furor upon great provocation. The prisoner has been punished enough; indeed it looks as if he ought never to have been sent to State prison. The law allowing a minimum of four months in the jail was intended to meet cases like this. The pardon is recommended by Judge Robinson, Dr. Person, C. B. Aycock, George R. Owens, H. G. Connor, William Woodard Jr., W. H. Yarborough, Solicitor John E. Woodard, who prosecuted the prisoner, J. H. Applewhite, Sheriff Crewell, Judge Lancaster and a large number of citizens of Wilson county. These citizens recommended this pardon two years ago. According to the statement in writing of Mr. Woodard, the case looks more like excusable homicide than manslaughter."

A large number of persons left for Morehead to day to attend the Teachers' Assembly.

POLITICS VS. REVENUE.

The Senate committee revised the House tariff bill, and proudly announced when it completed its work that it presented a measure that would give $40,000,000 more revenue than the House bill would have given. It did this mainly by a proposed increase of the tax on beer, tobacco, a tax on tea, and an increase of the tax on sugar (for the benefit of the Sugar Trust.) On introducing the bill in the Senate, Senator Aldrich, (chairman of the committee,) to prepare the country for this new departure and to defend it said:

"In the years to come we must expect a decrease rather than an increase in the customs revenue to be derived under the principal schedules of the tariff. Take the revenue from the metal schedule as an illustration. In 1893 the revenue from manufactures of iron and steel was more than $39 900 000. In the year 1896 this was reduced to $10,000,000, and a large portion of this sum was paid out as drawbacks upon tin plate.

"With duties adequately protective upon manufactures of cotton, wool, silk and flax we may expect a constantly diminishing revenue from the importations of these products. * * *

"The legitimate result of a protective policy is to give the American market to American producers. When this becomes an accomplished fact the revenue growing out of protective duties disappears. It must be evident, therefore, that we must look for other sources of revenue."

The logical deduction from this is that protection is in conflict with revenue and destroys it, which is the position taken by Democrats who have contended that if a tariff is to be for revenue it should be for revenue, and not so constructed as to destroy revenue. They insisted that it could not be a protective tariff and a revenue tariff at the same time, while the Republicans contended that it could be both. The admission which Senator Aldrich herein makes is an acknowledgment of the correctness of the Democratic position, and a confession that either protection or revenue must be abandoned. This means that protection must go, for we cannot abandon revenue without proclaiming for "free trade," which would be a horrid dose for the Republican statesmen, or destroying our trade with other nations by ceasing to buy from them.

But it is a confession, also, that that the American people who for thirty-two years had tolerated the Republican policy of protection have become tired of it, the proof of which is shown by Senator Aldrich in his reference to the decrease of protection on some of the leading articles of manufacture, and is still further shown by the large increase of articles which from time to time have been put upon the free list, including some of the most largely and universally used materials in the contry. With such a growing tendency to the free list it is simply a question of time when all the materials used by our manufacturers would find a place there. This would mean, of course, a corresponding reduction in protective duties until the whole system as advocated and administered within the past generation would go, and we would get back to the original Democratic idea of a tariff for revenue only.

Any tariff for revenue that would be worth passing as a revenue measure, must from the conditions that prevail now and are likely to prevail for many years to come, necessarily be incidentally a protective tariff, for any duty large enough to give reasonable revenue would more than cover the difference in wages between this and European countries with which our manufacturers would have to compete. This was what protection originally meant, and meant all the time until the protected interests became factors in politics, contributors to campaign funds, and insisted on being paid back by tariff bounties, under the fraudulent pretence of "protection."

Anticipating the opposition that would be made to the beer and tobacco tax, as a practical abandonment of the protective idea, Senator Aldrich proceeded in advance to defend it thus:

"Assuming that the necessity for additional revenue exists, there can be no question; no economic reason, and none that affects the public interests, why beer and tobacco should not bear their share of additional taxation."

This is true, literally true. When Senator Aldrich uttered it he was speaking not only for himself, but for his Republican colleagues on the committee, and for the majority of his Republican colleagues in the Senate. At that time the beer brewers had not reached the howling point nor sent word to the Republican managers what might be expected if they adhered to that beer tax, and the tea importers and wholesale men who had been contributing freely to campaign funds had not formulated and forwarded their vigorous protests against the tea tax. Mr. Aldrich hadn't heard in authoritative way from any of them when he pointed out the fairness and propriety of getting some more tax out of beer, tobacco, etc. They have heard since and have consequently decided that they will get along without the beer and tea tax and whack it on to something else that will not raise such a dreadful racket, or imperil any States that it may be necessary to carry in coming elections. In this case of politics versus revenue politics knocked revenue out on the first round and all of Mr. Aldrich's nice talk goes for naught.

Does any one suppose that if the principal beer brewing States had been Democratic and there was no hope for the Republicans of carrying them that this beer tax would have been abandoned when they had counted so confidently upon it as a means of raising the necessary revenue? Of course not. There wouldn't have been any politics in that, but as the case stood there was, and the Republican managers felt that they could not afford to antagonize the big brewers of such States as Ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Wisconsin, and others in which there are large numbers of beer consumers. That's what brought them to taw and made them surrender revenue rather than run the risk of loosing votes. With the Republican statesmen, when the issue is between politics and revenue, the revenue must go.

MINOR MENTION

We have since the Presidential election read some editorials in gold standard papers on the "Passing of Bryan" and a good deal of fatherly advice to that gentleman from the same source. They coolly assumed that the defeat at the polls relegated Mr. Bryan and that he could never again loom up as a potent factor in our national politics. Whether the writers were in earnest or not, or really believed what they wrote, neither their criticisms nor advice have had the slightest effect on that gentleman, who has proceeded on the lines marked out by himself and counsellors, and grown stronger and stronger with the people with every day that has been added to his years. He is a stronger man to-day than he was when he received the nomination for the Presidency and made that memorable canvass of the country, his judgment is more mature, and his devotion to the people more fully and generally recognized. This is made strikingly apparent by the way the people greet him. No man who had not the highest place in the esteem of the people could, after defeat, meet with such cordial and enthusiastic receptions as greet him in every part of the country which he visits, greetings to which he responds with good taste and admirable judgment. All this shows that the people have not lost sight of Wm. J. Bryan, and are not going to lose sight of him between this and the time of the meeting of the next National Democratic Convention.

***

Hon. Mark Hanna is not a talkative man but he has a business way of going about things which was recognized very very early in the last campaign and fully appreciated before the campaign closed. It was pretty generally believed that when Mr. McKinley was elected to the Presidency the power behind the throne so far as dispensing patronage and shaping Presidential policies went would be Mr. Hanna, but Mr. Hanna never proclaimed that, nor wrote it so it could get into print, for that would not be business. He did, however, recently depart from his usual discretion in this respect and thus let the world know that he looked upon himself as the boss patronage dispenser not only for his own State but for all the States. One A. T. Wimberly succeeded in securing his influence for the office of Collector of the Port of New Orleans, and got from him a letter of introduction to the Attorney General of the United States, stating among other things that Mr. Wimberly is a person "whom I have recommended for the Collectorship of the Port of New Orleans, and whom I consult concerning the patronage in Louisiana." As Louisiana is not in Mr. Hanna's balliwick the question might naturally be asked what business has he fooling with the patronage in that State. Having elected McKinley he doubtless feels that he has a preemption claim in the patronage.

Possibly the Republican tariff managers in Congress consented to put cotton on the dutiable list as at least an apparent offset to having put a duty on cotton ties. While the "protection" to cotton is a farce that can fool nobody who gives it the least thought, the "protection" to cotton ties means a tax of ten cents on every bale of cotton grown in the South, amounting in the aggregate to about $800,000 or $900,000—to come out of the cotton planters and go into the pockets of the tie makers. The fraud in this protection to ties is shown by the following which we clip from the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin:

"Putting cotton ties on the free list is regarded by the majority in the Senate as one of the grossest crimes of the present tariff and, of course, the injustice is to be remedied by restoring the duty to protect the American cotton tie industry. But not only have the iron trade journals reported on the fact that two-thirds of the current years supply of ties has already been sold by the American mills, no English ties at all having been sold in this country, but more than a year ago the Philadelphia Manufacturer, devoted pre-eminently to the cause of protection, mentioned that a steel company in Youngstown was then filling a contract for one of the largest shipments of cotton ties that ever left that iron centre, and knew going to Southern."

A Railroad Official's Experience.

MR. EDWARD EDMONDS, long connected with railroad construction in Nebraska, writes: "My heart troubled and pained me for 19 years. Shortness of breath was the constant and most common symptom. Intense, excruciating pain, generally followed any severe exertion. Faintness, hunger without any appetite; fluttering that made me clutch my breast, and palpitation that often staggered me as if I would fall, were frequent attacks. Again, everything would turn black if I arose from a stooping posture quickly. Sleepless nights with their prostrating unrest were numerous and I could get no rest day or night. I consulted leading physicians and tried advertised remedies. They gave me no relief. One of Dr. Miles' circulars described my case so exactly that I took Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and I am now a well man. I hope every one troubled with heart disease will try Dr. Miles' remedies. If they will write me personally, I will gladly give them full details of my experience." Rev. EDMONDS.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— In every foreign manufacturer whose goods are excluded from our markets by a prohitory tariff, we lose a customer for American goods. The Only Cure.

"It makes me boil with indignation," exclaimed Mr. Meekton's wife as she laid down the paper.

He waited in silence for her to continue and then responded in a tone of cautious inquiry:

"Does it, dear?"

"Are you attempting to carry on a conversation with me?"

"Yes, dear."

"Then, perhaps, it would be a good idea to find out what we are talking about before you venture any remarks."

"That's what I was trying to do, Henrietta. You wouldn't mind telling me, would you?"

"It's about burglars."

"Those you insisted were trying to get into the house last night, till we discovered there weren't any?"

"I suppose you want to be congratulated for bravery because you took the poker and went down cellar, while I stood on the top step and held the light?"

"No, Henrietta. That was a privilege. I appreciated the manner in which you took my gallantry for granted and stood aside and yielded me the right of way. It was one of the proudest moments of my life."

"Well, that has nothing to do with the case. I was reading of how a woman, with all the weakness of so many of her sex, clung to a housebreaker even after he was sent to the penitentiary. It happens every day."

"I have noticed ever so many cases of that kind," was the reply, "and the more I think about them the more mysterious they become. The remedy is a heroic one, but the cure seems to be complete in every case."

"What are you talking about?"

"Don't mistake me, Henrietta. I don't advise it at all. But it does seem that the only way a woman can get over being scared almost to death over burglars is to marry one."—Washington Star.

Bryant's Translations.

After Mrs. Bryant died, in 1866, says Henry D. Sedgwick, Jr., in The Atlantic, Bryant betook himself for consolation to the "Iliad" and the "Odyssey," which he completely translated before December, 1871, at the age of 77. There are few things more touching than this comfort tenderly given by man to man across the gap of 2,500 years. Nothing furnishes a more eloquent argument of the worth of poetry and of its profound humanity than this. The translation of Homer is a very personal matter and seems to stir some of those fires in the human breast that burn only in front of its own penates. Pope's translation was a success, Cowper's was a success, so were Lord Derby's and Mr. Bryant's. Mr. Lang and his associates, also Professor Palmer, have made excellent translations.

All these renderings are very different, one from another, and doubtless owe their respective successes to the variety among readers. There is one class of people which has never read the Greek, another that has read and forgotten, a third and small class which compares the translation and the original, and there are other persons still who condemn all translations of Homer without reading them. Bryant's work is said to be faithful to the original, but the stories of Iliums and of Odysseus feel somewhat ill at ease in English blank verse. The Greek spirit is so different from our spirit, the Greek language is so unlike our language, that almost all translators, and Bryant among them, must rest content with moderate praise.

The Pathology of Chilblains.

An eminent medical man is authority for the statement that chilblains are often caused by the condition of the blood, and that they are curable by proper treatment. He says that the blood is deficient in those qualities that cause coagulation. Children are much more subject to chilblains than grown persons from this cause. It is also said that a similar condition exists in people who are subject to serious nosebleed. Those who are subject to malaria are found to have blood in a similar condition. In fact, it is stated that it is possible, even on the western coast of Africa, for patients, after severe attacks of malarial fever, to suffer from chilblains. As to the treatment, it is necessary to increase the coagulability of the blood, and among other remedies recommended are calcium chloride and careful abstaining from acids, alcohol or excessive quantities of fluid of any sort. Increasing the coagulability of the blood wrought a complete cure in all cases.—New York Ledger.

A Sermon to Husbands.

The average man eats only two meals a day in his own house, and these meals are the opportunities for social and domestic talk, delightful to the wife, who has no such opportunity as her husband of rubbing against other minds all day, and important to the children in widening their horizon, their views of life.

At the first meal of the day most women like to talk to their husbands about the plans of the day, but the woman who has once received the distrait, self absorbed growl which emanates from a male disturbed in the reading of his newspaper, does not again attempt to ask her husband this or that on a subject of domestic interest. The back of a newspaper is not a pleasant thing to contemplate across the breakfast table.

Think of this, husbands, when you look round for the casters or other suitable prop for the back of your paper, and for the sake of good manners, for the sake of your wife's feelings and the example to your children, remove your newspaper, reserving it for the train, omnibus or tram car.

Of course there are occasions when matters of absorbing interest must be looked to at once—telegrams of thrilling import. Why not glance at the paper five minutes before the breakfast bell rings if it is really essential that such news should be seen at once? Special occasions sometimes justify special behavior, but of your mercy let the newspaper be banished from the breakfast table on ordinary occasions.—English Exchange.

On American Hotel Clerks.

L. F. Austin, in London Sketch, supposes that "the American hotel clerk is still the dread of the inexperienced traveler. When you stand in his presence, you become at once aware that you are a hardened offender and that here is the magistrate who will appoint a fitting punishment for your crimes. He growls the number of your room as if it were the condemned cell, and you are a little surprised that he does not assume the black cap and invoke the divine clemency on your soul. I used to think he suffered from overstudy of the rights of man and regarded them as a social pyramid with himself as the apex.

"In the European hotel the traveler is accustomed to be treated with consideration. He stays in the house for his own pleasure and looks upon the administrators as designed for his service. Such a theory is hateful to the peculiar republicanism of the American hotel clerk. He is something more than a man and your brother, for he does not recognise equality, much less deferential civility. The hotel is a house not of entertainment, but correction, and if you do not care for the discipline you can go elsewhere without exciting in the clerk the slightest emotion of surprise or even of inquiry. Should America ever be disposed to try the experiment of an oligarchy a junta of hotel clerks might conduct the business of the country with an impassive severity which would have astonished the council of ten."

Combinations and Wages.

In what lines of industry are the wages lowest and the abuses greatest? Is it in those where modern methods have been most extensively employed, and where machinery, with its attendant concentration of power, has made the most progress, or is it in those whose methods are survivals from an earlier stage of industrial order?

To this question there can be but one answer. The lowest wages, the most unsanitary conditions, the grossest abuses and oppressions are not to be found in factories, but in tenement house industries. It is among the cigar makers, or among the workers in certain branches of the ready made clothing trade that these matters are at their worst. Yet it is just here that the conditions of employment are most like those which prevailed in earlier industrial periods.

The sufferers under the sweating system are not, as is so often charged, the victims of the present industrial order. They are the victims of a survival of past labor conditions into an age which has become familiar with better ones.—Professor Arthur T. Hadley in Atlantic.

Thoreau and Emerson.

With all his seclusion and stoicism, Thoreau was less impersonal than Emerson—nay, his very retirement and his paucity of friends made him cling the more firmly to the few he had. Emerson's range was wider; his horizon was more ample, but he did not attach himself so closely to those things and thoughts in which he took an interest. Hence we find more form in the thought of Emerson, more color in that of Thoreau, and, so far as literary style is concerned, the page of Thoreau often excels that of Emerson. Both are epigrammatic. But the epigrams of Thoreau are the more keen and searching if not so elegant. Emerson dealt more with principles, Thoreau with facts. He had the homely wisdom of Socrates, while Emerson rejoiced in the lofty sweep of Plato.

In their learning, which was great—as Americans reckon the scope of learning—Thoreau was the more exact, Emerson the more comprehensive and suggestive. Both were masters of English, but in Emerson was more mannerism, in Thoreau more rhetorical art in his best pages, more simplicity in his ordinary writing. Both will endure as authors and will continue to attract and to instruct by their deep, cheerful wisdom and their high moral purpose. —F. B. Sanborn in Forum.

Unpublished Letter of Nelson.

The following characteristic letter of Nelson, believed to be unpublished, is in my possession:

ALBEMARLE, NEW YORK, Nov. 14, 1793.

DEAR PULFORD—Since I saw you yesterday I have changed my mind about appointing Edwards as bookwash, but will ask Lord Hood to give him the rating in some other ship. This, I hope, will do as well. I am to dine with the admiral today and very likely shall not be on board till 8. Will you sup with me at 10? I will speak with you about Rose and what can be done. My interest at home, you know, is next to nothing; the name of Nelson being little known. It may be different one of these days. A good chance only is wanting to make it so. Yours sincerely,

HORATIO NELSON.

Curious National Custom.

"I was so mad," said the vivacious young American lady, "that I could have eaten a pound of nails."

The listening Englishman made a note in his commonplace book that evening, "Anger is so well recognized as a nervous complaint in this country that the natives are in the habit of taking iron to counteract it."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Twenty-seven hundredweight, or nearly 1¾ tons, of gold plate was often placed on the tables of ancient Roman epicures.

The True Remedy.

W. M. Repine, editor Tiskilwa, Ill., "Chief," says: "We won't keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have a certain and sure cure for Coughs Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and besides is guaranteed it never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles free at R. R. BELLAMY'S Drug Store.

Mammals In the Water.

Cats, which have an intense dislike of wet, swim well, carrying the head high. Their distaste for aquatics does not extend to the larger cats. Tigers are fond of bathing, swim fast, and, in the case of the "river tigers" of the Sunderbunds and the tigers near the coast of the straits of Malacca are constantly noticed in the water. Whether the trained Egyptian cats which were used to take waterfowl in the reed beds by the Nile ever swam when stalking them does not appear from the ancient pictures. But the extent to which the dog voluntarily becomes aquatic entitles some breeds to be considered amphibious. A dog belonging to a waterman living near one of the Thames ferries has been known to continue swimming out in the stream for an hour without coming to land. It did this for amusement on a fine Sunday morning.

Another riverside dog was taught to dive and fetch up stones thrown in which sank to the bottom. This dog would pick out stones from the bottom of a bucket of water, selecting one which it had been shown before from a number of others. It had so far become amphibious that it could use its eyes under water. In France otter hound puppies are introduced to their aquatic life by settling their kettle of soup in a pond or stream so that they must go in deep to feed. Soon they become as fast swimmers on the surface as the otter itself, though the physical advantages of submarine motion give the otter the advantage when it is below the surface.—London Spectator.

AMANDA.

Where sun and flower are beaming
Amanda's charms appear.
Her beauty's rays are streaming
Round all this earthly sphere.
The breeze when gently blowing,
The rose that scents the grove,
The vine when brightly glowing,
All tell of her I love.

I hear her song's sweet numbers
When zephyr's breezy wings
Sweep o'er the gold harp's slumbers
And wake its tuneful strings.
All, all the charms of nature
Amanda's beauty bear.
And show in every feature
Her godhead imaged there.

The spirits of the dying
Must quit this clay's control,
But they to rest are flying
In realms of the soul.
The floods, now onward striding,
Are foaming, fierce and free,
Yet soon their waves, subsiding,
Will slumber in the sea.

But I must vainly languish
For joys I ne'er can know
And wear a cureless anguish
In loneliness and woe.
Fair goddess, I shall ever
Behold thy beauty shine
Like stars above, but never
Can hope to call thee mine!

—Eric Johan Stagnelius.

HIS NOVEL METHOD.

A Sheriff Who Appointed His Deputy with a Double Barreled Shotgun.

That tale related of an Alabama girl who shot a young man a couple of times and then married him recalls the method employed by George Bardsley, one of the early day sheriffs of Ellis county, in appointing his deputies. One night he was called to Chris Riley's saloon, where "Texas Frank," a newly arrived desperado in Hays City, was "shooting out" the place—a performance which consisted in the promiscuous firing of his "gun" at the barkeeper, bystanders, lamps, bottles and pictures. Sheriff Bardsley grabbed the first weapon handy in his own saloon, which happened to be a double barreled shotgun, and proceeded to Riley's on the run. Dashing in he ordered Frank to throw up his hands, and the response was a bullet from Frank's 44. Letting go both barrels of his shotgun, Bardsley brought the desperado to the floor, so full of shot holes that he couldn't hold either air or water.

Frank was not killed, however, and in course of time recovered, under the kind attention which he received in the county jail. Presently it was observed that the Texas man was walking around town without a guard, and a little later the people were astonished to find him serving legal papers and making arrests. Bardsley was approached by a newspaper man at this time, when the following colloquy took place:

"Is Texas Frank your deputy?" queried the reporter.

"Yep!" was the sententious response of Bardsley.

"How does that come?" was the next inquiry.

"Well, you see," said Bardsley, "most sheriffs appoint their deputies, but I like to shoot mine."—Kansas City Journal.

Men, Women and Hats.

A German professor has been studying that article of masculine apparel which the irreverent call a "stovepipe" and has found in it proof of man's superiority to woman. Time was, he says, when men, like women now, ornamented their hats with ribbons and feathers more or less beautiful and wore garments of the brightest colors they could find. This was all "plumage d'amour;" it indicated no intellectual superiority and no moral worth. It merely represented the superiority of the peacock over the peahen. Now men have molted. Their headgear has become the unplumed "stovepipe," their habit the inexpressive frock coat. It is woman, the professor points out, who wears the "plumage d'amour" today, in her hat and elsewhere.

Nature, he explains, means something by every evolution or revolution she permits. What she means by this one is that fine feathers are best suited to the feather brained. The plumed hat of woman is symbolical of her fall, the plain "stovepipe" of man, of his rise in intellectuality. Man's moral worth, in short, has become such that he can lose plumage to the inferior animals. If this isn't "just like a man for all the world," nothing ever was.—New York Times.

All Wrong.

One of the boys brought home his arithmetic lesson, and his mother, after watching his struggles for a time in silence, offered to help him.

"Oh, no," said he, with a look of scorn, "you can't do it to save you." As the mother was a college graduate she naturally felt somewhat nettled at this and insisted upon her ability to solve the problem. She did so to her own satisfaction, but not to the boy's. He declared that she did not do it right, though he could not tell what was wrong.

"Well leave it to papa," said she finally. The father, too, was a college graduate and had taken high honors in mathematics. The father said that the mother's method was the right one and, indeed, the only one. Unconvinced, the boy went off to school the next morning. At noon he came home triumphant.

"There, I told you so!" he shouted as he entered the house. "You did it wrong."

"What was the matter?" both parents asked.

"Well, you left out two 'sinces' and a 'hence,'" was the convincing reply.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Not Breathless.

Aunt Maria (at the theater)—Why do all those men rush out in breathless haste the moment the curtain falls?

Uncle Henry—Just wait till they come in again, and you'll understand it.

When they returned, there was not a breathless one among them.—Boston Transcript.

MARY'S ROMANCE.

She was the neighborhood seamstress, a small, pale girl of quiet manners and infinite patience.

Mary was her name, and we all deemed it fitting. Her eyes were, as the village gossips put it, her only beauty. They were large and blue gray. There was a wistful sweetness in them that won the hearts of such of her patrons as occasionally let a thought stray from darts and leg o' muttons and revers to the silent fashioner of the same.

Mary's unobtrusive personality was reflected in the gray gowns and hats which she always wore. Some of her employers, angular of face and figure and unlovely of character, might have found cause for complaint in their hireling's predilection for the sunshine and color and joy of life. So Mary adhered to nunlike shades and her remarks were confined to inquiries about the comfort giving qualities of the garments she manufactured.

She had come from the nearest city five years before. She had lived quietly "in rooms," and those who peddled sensations in their own "setel" found her humble little affairs of no concern. One or two would be gallants found she had a remarkable talent for aloofness. It was the same with the few young women who might have sought her society. The women whom she served regarded her as a cheap and skillful machine, and there their interest ended. Hers was a lonely life, and it was some unknown influence that kept her so well poised and quietly cheerful.

Mary had a romance. When asked about it, she responded with blushes and happy glances.

It was not very different from that of other girls as poor and patient as Mary. They had grown up together—that phrase that embraces so much of youthful hope and sympathy! Their parents had lived side by side. Hers died first. She had learned the trade from a city dressmaker and had come to the village because there were so many of her vocation in the big town. That was all, except that Frank, too, became an orphan and his task of getting through the law school had been doubly hard for that reason. He had just completed the task and was going to locate in the capital of the adjoining state. She could not see him so often now, but if all went well they would be together in a year. Then her little sister lived there with her aunt. Frank had never seen her, but they would soon be friends because of her.

"Is your sister like you, Mary?" asked the merchant's wife as she hemmed a ruffle overhand.

"Oh, no!" said the little seamstress. "I have not seen her since she was a child, but she was beautiful then. Frank cannot help liking her."

Mary told the rest of the story a year later with her head pillowed on her friend's broad bosom and her slender, gray figure shaken by the storm of a woman's great grief.

"Don't mind me, Mrs. Brown," she said when she felt big tears falling upon her hair. "It was probably for the best. She is a more suitable wife for Frank. I couldn't keep pace with him when I had to sew all day and in the evening, too, and she is so young and bright and lovely. She didn't know and he couldn't help loving her. Don't blame them."

The neighborhood seamstress, worn from her close companionship with the bright, slender needle that won for her her bread, had yielded to her aunt's and sister's invitation and gone to the capital for a fortnight.

Besides, as she wrote Frank, it was high time she did some shopping in the city, for she "needed some of the things for her modest little outfit." Frank made no reference to this pretty little passage in his reply. She thought this was due to his absorption in his cares and tried not to be pained by the omission.

Her "little sister," grown into a wondrously pretty young woman, and Frank were at the station to meet her. Ruby's greeting was warmly affectionate. The proprieties did not admit of Frank's being so, she knew, and she scolded herself for the dull little pain at her heart because it was so. She was glad to see on what friendly terms Frank and Ruby were. She was so glad they liked each other. But she had been sure they would.

"I found it out that evening," she sobbed. "It was only a little accident that told me they loved each other. But a woman's heart is clever, if her brain isn't. I had a good excuse for going to bed early, for I was tired from the journey. I never slept at all. Mrs. Brown, I could see how well Frank and Ruby looked together. The picture of them standing under the gaslight drove me nearly crazy. I knew she was a wife Frank could be proud of, and I wasn't. But my life was so empty without him. My love for him and plans for a little home of our own were the only bright things in it. I knew why his letters had been so few and short when I saw him look at her that evening. I thought I would go mad that night. I believe I should have. But toward morning peace came to me—that kind of peace, you know, that comes after a storm on the ocean, that leaves the shore strewn with wrecks. Still it was peace. That came after I made up my mind to give him up.

"Oh, Mrs. Brown, it was so easy for him. He just said, 'I'm sorry, Mary,' but he looked as though he would have said, 'I am ashamed, Mary,' and he didn't ask me why. He knew I knew all about it, but she never did. Dear heart! I'm going to make the white dress over to fit her, and the other things too. Oh, yes, I will. You know, Mrs. Brown, I'm not used to it yet, and it breaks my heart to look at them. They will be married next month."

They were. Mary, the little seamstress, still lives in the village, but she has changed much. The blue of her eyes has faded into the gray, and we think sometimes her cheeks are taking on that ashen hue, or is it a reflection of her gown?

She is as patient as ever, but not so strong. Poor little Mary!—Ada Patterson, in St. Louis Republic.

No Sale.

"This maple sugar"—began the mild looking customer.

"Is a fraud and an imitation, of course," interrupted the irritable grocer, "but I manage to get 16 cents a pound for it all right. When a man begins to talk like that, I know exactly what he's going to say, and I've got tired of having the same speech slung at me 100 times a day."

"I was about to say," resumed the mild looking customer, "that this maple sugar is the finest I have seen on the street, and I am something of a judge of the article, having dealt in it myself. I wanted 50 pounds of it, but as it's a fraud and an imitation, why, of course, I haven't any use for it. I bid you"—

"Hold on!" said the grocer. "Where did you ever deal in maple sugar?"

"I used to have an extensive grove of maple trees in Ohio."

"What part of Ohio?"

"In the edge of a little town called Hunkersville."

"How many trees were in the grove?"

"I think there must have been over 100."

"How much sugar did you make from them?"

"Well, some seasons I turned out as high as 750 pounds."

"You don't live there now?"

"No."

"When did you move away?"

"About nine years ago."

"I think that's right," rejoined the grocer after a brief mental calculation. "I lived in that town myself when I was a boy, and I've been back there several times since, and I happen to know there isn't a sugar maple tree within 14 miles of the place. Your name is Highstide, and I know you from away back. You hadn't any more idea of buying 50 pounds of this sugar than you had of going to heaven in a chariot of fire. You only wanted 5 cents' worth to eat, and you know it. You're the same old liar you used to be, and—going? Well, good morning."—Chicago Tribune.

You May Read at Breakfast.

At breakfast every one is allowed to read letters and papers unmolested, but at dinner it is only the careless, ill bred man or woman who peruses his or her evening's mail and rustles the sheets of a last edition.—Boston Globe.

Transferring Pictures.

Prints or lithographs may be transferred to glass by a very simple process. The glass is cleaned with alcohol and a polisher, then coated with fine dammar varnish, laid on very evenly. It is then put away in a place where there is no dust, where it is to remain until it is so sticky that when touched with the finger the glass, if a small plate, may be lifted by the adhesion. The picture to be transferred must be soaked in rainwater until it is completely saturated, then placed between sheets of blotting paper and gently pressed. This removes all superfluous water. Now put the pictures, face down, upon the sticky side of the glass. The utmost care is necessary in placing it, as once it touches it cannot be moved without danger of tearing out pieces of the print. When it is adjusted, begin at one corner and press the picture closely upon the adhesive surface, watching it continually to see that no air bubbles appear between the picture and the varnished surface. When this is finished, put the picture away again, let it remain until quite dry, then lay a wet towel over the back of the picture until the paper is thoroughly soaked.

Now begin at one corner, and, with the fingers, frequently dipped in water so that they will remain wet, rub off the white paper. Continue this until all the white portion is removed. This will leave only the color of the picture upon the glass. At the finish give the back a rather heavy coat of transparent varnish. Let it dry thoroughly and add a very thin second coat. When this is perfectly dry, frame the picture with a very thin glass over the varnished side. Hang in the window as a transparency. A few attempts may be necessary before expert handling is acquired, but perseverance will bring success, and with care and a little ingenuity very many beautiful pictures may be prepared at the most trifling expense.—New York Ledger.

Early English Bindings.

During the reign of Elizabeth the fashion in binding underwent a considerable change, the graceful simplicity of the early work, with its rather severe and restrained ornament, giving place to a heavy, overdecorated style, in which a superabundance of gilding hid poverty of design. This style reached its height in the bindings produced for James I, which were commonly dotted all over with flowers-de-luce or thistles, while the corners were filled with a heavy block of coarse design. During the reign of Charles the bindings were as a rule copied from French work and the designs carried out with very small tools; but, though foreign influence was strongly felt at first, the English binders soon struck out a line of their own, and Samuel Mearne, the binder to Charles II, produced some admirable work and seems to have introduced the quaintly shaped panel which gave the name of cottage binding to a certain class of work. At a little later date an Edinburgh binder whose name is unknown, but whose work is easily distinguishable, executed some marvelous pieces of work on very dark green morocco.—Athenæum.

A Parliament Custom.

Before the speech from the throne is read, when the houses are resumed in the afternoon, by the lord chancellor in the house of lords and the speaker in the house of commons, it is the practice in both houses to read one bill a first time pro forma in order to assert their right of deliberation without reference to the immediate cause of summons. This practice is enjoined in the house of lords by a standing order. In the house of commons the same form is observed pursuant to ancient custom and of the following resolution, passed March 22, 1608: "That the first day of every sitting in every parliament some one bill, and no more, receiveth a first reading for form sake." In the house of commons the clerk of parliaments produces an ancient document which has served this purpose for at least a century, entitled "A bill for effectually preventing clandestine outlawries," which is duly read a first time and ordered to be read a second time and will never be heard of again till the opening of the next session.—London News.

Marvelous Mechanism of the Human Body.

The human body is an epitome in nature of all mechanics, all hydraulics, all architecture, all machinery of every kind. There are more than 310 mechanical movements known to mechanics today, and all of these are but modifications of those found in the human body. Here are found all the bars, levers, joints, pulleys, pumps, pipes, wheels and axles, ball and socket movements, beams, girders, trusses, buffers, arches, columns, cables and supports known to science. At every point man's best mechanical work can be shown to be but adaptations of processes of the human body, a revelation of first principles used in nature.—William George Jordan in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Pandects of Justinian.

The pandects of Justinian, the most complete body of Roman laws ever collected, were supposed to be lost, but in 1187, when Amalfi was taken and plundered by the Pisans, a private soldier found a copy which he sold to an officer for a few pence. The value of the discovery was soon apparent and the precious volume was taken to Pisa and stored in the city library. When Pisa was stormed by the Florentines, in 1415, the precious volume was captured and taken to Florence, where it was placed in the library of the Medici.

Skilled Nursing.

Skilled nursing is now regarded as of quite as much significance as expert medical attendance. Those whose means will permit of it generally employ trained nurses, and between the professional assistant of the physician in the home and hospital treatment for various ailments the old conditions of the sickroom have almost passed away.—Baltimore Herald.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 15, 1897

HAWAII TO BE ANNEXED

A TREATY WRITTEN AND FULLY AGREED UPON.

Will Be Sent to the Senate as Soon as the President Returns to Washington—To Checkmate Plans of the Japanese Government.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—A treaty for the annexation of Hawaii to the United States will be sent to the Senate soon after the return of the President unless present plans are altered. The treaty has been written and all its details were fully agreed upon before the President and Secretary Sherman left for the South.

The treaty is on the general lines of the treaty negotiated during the administration of President Harrison and withdrawn by President Cleveland. It provides for annexation without the exaction of conditions on the part of the Hawaiians as to the form of government to be vouchsafed to Hawaii, leaving that question to be entirely disposed of by the government of the United States.

The United States will agree, however, to assume the debt of the present Hawaiian government, but will come into possession of all the Hawaiian crown lands and other possessions.

Several Senators have received definite information concerning the existence of the treaty and are well acquainted with its terms, though they refuse to discuss the matter, having received the information in confidence. The knowledge of the existence of the treaty has been communicated to members of the Committee on Foreign Relations and also to members of the Finance Committee. In the Republican caucuses the subject of the treaty had been hinted at, but in rather a vague manner. Senators asserted that there were in progress negotiations looking to annexation, but they would not aver they knew a treaty had been drawn, nor would they give any assurances that it would soon be sent to the Senate. In private conversation with other Senators, however, they gave information that was definite enough to satisfy those with whom they had talked, that the treaty was not only to be sent in, but that it was now already drawn and only awaiting the signatures of the officers of the two Governments to complete it. It is known that the approval of the Committee on Foreign Relations is assured, as eight members of the committee have approved its terms. This will enable the committee to speedily report the treaty to the Senate, so that it may be taken up immediately after the Tariff bill is disposed of.

The Senate has been canvassed to a certain extent by Senators favoring annexation and while there are some Senators who are non-committal, the supporters of the proposition say they believe that they can count upon the two-thirds vote necessary to insure ratification.

The especial friends of the President about the Senate say that the treaty has been made in accordance with his views and that it would have been sent in some time ago but for his exactions as to details.

The present condition in Hawaii, it is said, has had much to do with favorable consideration of the treaty of annexation. The present Government of Hawaii and the people who support it are very much concerned about the Japanese situation. Private information received by Hawaiians in this city is to the effect that the Japanese at any time may take some action looking towards the acquisition of the island. The advices officially received are of much the same tenor. The sentiment in the Senate seems to be that Japan in no way should control the islands or get a foothold there. This argument has been used to prevent even notice of abrogation of the present treaty in the tariff bill. It is said that such notice might be followed by Japanese occupation and the islands could not be regained by the United States without a struggle. In this connection it is learned that the conversations among the most prominent Japanese residents of Hawaii, which have been reported to the representatives of the islands in Washington, have been of a threatening character and that the American residents have more concern than has been shown in the published accounts.

The officials at the State Department steadfastly refuse to make a statement as to the negotiations of a treaty providing for the annexation of Hawaii, and at the Hawaiian legation the same silence is observed. However, it is known that the treaty, though not yet signed, is drawn up ready for signature, and as the President is fully aware of its scope, there is no reason to doubt that he will authorize its signature. In this case it is expected that the document will be sent to the Senate for its action very soon, even within a week, it is said, in some well informed quarters. If this is the case, it may be taken for granted that the President has taken steps to assure himself of a favorable reception of a treaty in the Senate and to guard against such a mishap as befell the arbitration treaty.

STEAMER DAUNTLESS

Left Key West on Another Filibustering Expedition.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 14.—The Citizen has received the following dispatch from Key West: The Dauntless has left on another expedition. After taking on thirty-three Cubans she attempted to go through the northwest passage, about 10 o'clock last night and ran ashore. Assistance was sent for and the tugs Clyde and Childs went and pulled her off. About half-past 4 o'clock this morning the Dauntless changed her course, and returning to the harbor, passed the Marblehead and put to sea. The Marblehead started in pursuit. The schooner Adams took forty tons of merchandise from the Biscayne to-day and went to sea to meet the Dauntless.

DEBATE ON THE TARIFF

SENATOR TILLMAN HAS A TILT WITH SENATOR HOAR.

Allen Argues the Right and Duty of the Government to Take Legal Steps to Dissolve the Sugar Trust—A Monster Petition for Recognition of Cuba Presented in the House.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—When the Tariff bill was taken up Senator Allison obtained an agreement that the daily sessions of the Senate begin at 11 a. m. on and after Wednesday next. This was conditional on the fact that the Senate adjourn each afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Senator Allen, of Nebraska, then reverted to the colloquy, last Saturday, in which he held that it was the right and duty of the Government to take legal steps to dissolve the Sugar Trust. He argued that injunction, quo warranto, and other legal process could be invoked against the trust.

Senator Allen next spoke in favor of abrogating the Hawaiian treaty.

Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota followed in support of his amendment proposing that articles made by a trust be put on the free list. He asserted that it was a serious question how the present "government by the trusts and for the trusts" could be thrown off. There were trusts in coal, sugar, oil, glass, steel, chemicals, crockery, and all other great staples, stifling competition and setting up the rule of the monopoly. No tariff bill would be successful, he said, without some defence of the people against the trusts, and such a bill would meet with popular commendation. [As a protectionist he offered this amendment, believing that with it the tariff bill could be defended against assaults.

When Senator Pettigrew concluded the Senate was brought back to the pending amendment by Senator Lindsay to strike out the distinction as to the Dutch standard, in the first paragraph of the sugar schedule, placing all sugars on an equality of one cent per pound and three-hundredths of a cent additional for every degree above 75. The amendment was defeated.

Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, offered his amendment for the appointment by the President of a commission of five members to investigate into the subject of sugar production and the best means of supplying the American market at the least cost.

Reverting to published statements of irregularity in connection with the sugar schedule, Senator Hoar said that although it had been suggested in the press that somebody had been bribing Senators, these statements are received by serious people throughout the country "with absolute contempt."

Senator Allison suggested that Mr. Hoar's amendment ought to be considered by the Finance Committee.

Senator Hoar agreed to the reference of the amendment to the committee, and this was done.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, then answered Senator Hoar. He said he had the deepest respect for the integrity of the Senator from Massachusetts. But perhaps he had become callous in his long service, as was indicated by the statement that the best people of both parties treated with contempt the statements that there was irregularity in making the sugar schedule. But, said Senator Tillman, when published statements were made that Senators were in touch with sugar barons, when circumstantial evidence was at hand that a huge monopoly levied tribute on the public, that the American people were helpless in the grasp of this octopus, then it was strange, indeed, that any Senator should assert that the people treat with contempt these charges. On the contrary, he declared, the people wanted an investigation; they wanted the Senate vindicated, or the men who slandered it punished. For that reason, Senator Tillman said, he had contemplated an amendment to Senator Hoar's proposition so that the commission would not only inquire into the mere machinery of sugar making, but also "whether the Sugar Trust has used undue means to control legislation, and to get at the root of sugar—how it is and why it is that the American Senate can't touch sugar without getting contaminated."

Turning to the South Carolina Senator, Senator Hoar said there were some men who seemed to think that down beneath the body of the people there was a great mass of seething people eager for extremes. He knew thoroughly the character, purposes and opinions of the men who get their living from the farms and factories of Massachusetts. He had sprung from a yeoman, his associations had been with that class and he knew what they were thinking about. "They are," he proceeded impressively, "a simple, sincere, honest, liberty-loving, God-fearing men. They think no evil, and the appeal to vile passions falls on deaf ears with them."

"Will the Senator permit me," broke in Senator Tillman.

Senator Hoar went on without pausing. The men who make up the farms and the factories were the same throughout, he said. Their kinsmen had turned westward, building up a new empire there, a larger and a more glorious New England. "And I hold," concluded Senator Hoar, "that to the great body of these people these charges are not only preposterous but infamous."

Senator Tillman again was ready with a reply. "As to the seething mass of ignorance, as the Senator from Massachusetts had designated the masses," said Senator Tillman—

But the Massachusetts Senator promptly interrupted him. "I deny that statement," said Senator Hoar. "I said just the contrary, and my statement is perverted."

"Very well," answered Senator Tillman, "you are the last man I would be willing to misrepresent to his face."

While he claimed no special mission, he went on, yet he claimed to have come from the farm and from the people, and to have come to the Senate more recently than the Massachusetts Senator. He knew, he said, "that the only thing infamous in this transaction, in the view of the people, was the refusal to investigate and this effort to "hide behind the Senatorial toga." If the Senate persisted in this, then it was disgraced before the people. Public charges had been made that bribery was abroad in connection with this subject. "And unless you investigate you stand convicted," asserted the Senator.

After this diverting incident the Senate came back to the bill, and Senator Lindsay moved to strike out 1 95-100 cents and insert 1 8 10 cents as the rate on sugar.

This drew from Senator Allison an animated defence of the paragraph. The Senate paragraph differed from the original provision, he said, in only one particular, viz., the substitution of 1 95 for 1.875, which difference amounted to only 7 1 10 cents per 100 pounds. He asserted that the ascending scale of 8 100 cents on each degree above 75 was not an excessive benefit to the refiner.

When Senator Allison referred to the fact that the committee had pursued very largely the course of the Democratic Finance Committee, Senator Tillman came in with the remark: "Do you emulate or imitate the villainies indulged in by your Democratic colleagues three years ago?"

"I did not indulge in epithets; I did not say villainy," answered Senator Allison.

"No; I said it," responded Senator Tillman.

The bill was laid aside without a vote on the pending Lindsay amendment, and at 5 10 the Senate held an executive session, adjourning soon after.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

In the area in front of the Speaker's rostrum, when the House met to day, was a monster petition appealing to Congress to recognize the Cuban insurgents as belligerents. It contained over 6,000,000 signatures. The petition was wound about the hub of a wheel framed so as to allow it to freely revolve. It had been in circulation throughout the United States for about six months, and was sent to Congressman Sulzer, of New York, for presentation to Congress by Franz Mayer, a resident of his district.

Without transacting any business, the House adjourned until Thursday.

M'KINLEY AT ASHEVILLE.

An Unexpected Incident—Attended a Meeting of Colored People—seven Colored Men Fanned While the Handshaking Went On.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 14.—The Presidential train arrived here at 11 40 o'clock this forenoon. The party was met at the depot by a local reception committee and the Asheville Light Infantry. The President was received by Mayor Rankin and E. P. McKissick, manager of the Battery Park Hotel, to which all of the party were driven for luncheon. The streets were crowded and there were many decorations, including national flags by the hundreds.

An unexpected incident developed this afternoon when it was learned by newspaper men accompanying the party that permission to enter the Biltmore house, Geo. W. Vanderbilt's splendid mansion, had been refused to them while extended to other members of the party Mr. Vanderbilt is abroad, and his representative, Charles McNamee, is with him. In the absence of both, the estate is governed by E. J. Harding, said to be an Englishman by birth. When waited on by the local committee of arrangements a day or two ago for permission for the President and party to enter Biltmore, he objected strongly to receiving any members of the party other than the President and his Cabinet and the ladies with them. He even refused permission of Manager McKissick, of the Battery Park Hotel, in charge of the party here, and in the course of conversation had with two members of the committee said: "Mr. Vanderbilt spits on newspaper notpriety, and so do I."

After this there was nothing for the local committee to do but withdraw. So the matter rested till to day when the President arrived and J. Addison Porter, his secretary, was told of the incident. He must have informed the President, for later Mr. Harding was called up on the telephone by Mr. Porter and asked if it were true that newspaper men would not be admitted to the mansion. Porter was told that it was, and he then informed Mr. Harding that the President considered the newspaper men his invited guests on the trip and that they were as much a contingent of the party as members of the Cabinet. Furthermore, Mr. Porter notified Mr. Harding that the President had authorized him to say that if newspaper men were barred from the mansion he would not step his foot inside the estate. This brought things to a crisis and Mr. Harding capitulated with the best grace possible and the newspaper men were admitted to the mansion on the same footing as the President and his Cabinet.

Before going to Biltmore, Representative Pearson persuaded Mr. McKinley to attend a meeting of colored people at the Young Men's Institute Hall, the gift of George W. Vanderbilt. The hall was filled with colored people, comprising the laboring classes as well as local colored politicians and their wives and children. With Congressman Pearson at his side, he shook hands at a rapid rate for ten minutes with all who were presented to him. It was very warm work, and presently the President called for air, and seven colored men fanned him while the handshaking went on.

At Biltmore the luxuries of the library were lingered over with especial delight. Mrs. McKinley was given a handrome bouquet from Mrs. Vanderbilt's conservatories as she left the chateau. The drive continued over the French Broad boundaries of the estate, from the river cottage to the entrance lodge. The train was at Biltmore station and the journey to Washington resumed about 6 o'clock. Secretary Alger was indisposed from the extreme heat of the past two days, but left Asheville somewhat recuperated.

MORGANTON, N. C., June 14.—In a letter to the Asheville Citizen, published this afternoon, Mr. Harding said that his instructions regarding newspaper men were in pursuance of what he deemed to be Mr. Vanderbilt's orders, and that the latter had never cabled an invitation to visit Biltmore to the President or any of his party. The beautiful ride over the Southern was greatly enjoyed during the evening, and this point was reached without incident. The train is due to arrive in Washington at 7 30 to-morrow.

BIMETALLISM.

The Subject of Hon. W. J. Bryan's Lecture at Norfolk, Va.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NORFOLK, Va., June 14.—Hon. William Jennings Bryan, engaged to speak here to-night under the auspices of the Chautauqua by the Sea, arrived this morning from Washington, accompanied by Hon. Arthur Sewall, of Maine. He was met at the boat by two committees of citizens, and after breakfast at the hotel, was taken with his party, in a special car to Virginia Beach, where he spent several hours. Returning at 4:30 p. m., he and Mr. Sewall held a reception of an hour at the Atlantic hotel, after which he spoke very briefly to a number of his admirers who had gathered at the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Sewall left early in the evening for New York, and at 8 o'clock Mr. Bryan proceeded to Armory hall, where he addressed an audience of about 4 000, the subject of his lecture being "Bimetallism." He left at 10:30 for Charlottesville, where he speaks at the University of Virginia to-morrow.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

All the Buildings at Ellis Island, the New York Immigrant Station, Destroyed.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The main building for the reception and clearance of immigrants at Ellis island is on fire. This building contains the valuable records relating to the passage of immigrants into this country through this port. From the main land the flames appear to have complete control of the building.

1 30 A. M.—All the buildings on the island will be destroyed. The fire is now at its height and presents a magnificent spectacle as seen from the city.

1 40 A. M.—All the immigrants, about two hundred in number, have just been brought safely from Ellis Island to the barge office at the Battery. The only persons now left on the island are the firemen and a few attendants. There will be probably no loss of life. All the records are undoubtedly destroyed.

Queer Color Names.

People wear vesuvius red now, and elephant's breath, london smoke, tabac, crushed raspberry and strawberry and robin's egg blue and other shades, but fashionable folks of old wore colors with names more odd sounding still. Innocent infant was once a favorite color, and captain's glory, also a sad drab color known as penitent hermit. A gown of caterpillar brown might be adorned with trimmings of canary tail, A strong gray, blended with purple, was dubbed lively flea, and, whereas there is now break of day pinks, milliners of a century ago trimmed poke bonnets with ruchings of thought of the beloved one and quillings of doe's belly.

A court beauty in the time Henry IV of France affected a color known as mortal sin, and it came to be the rage forthwith, and common harm was another popular fancy for stomachers and petticoats.

One subtle, barely hinted at shade was christened stifled sigh. Dead alive was another anomalous color greatly in favor in Marie Antoinette's time, most of these out of the way and rather undecided shades being chosen by women whose dainty coloring needed only an unobtrusive background to bring it into relief.—New York Sun.

Ants as Guests of Plants.

The ants which are really protective to plants are not those which obtain their food (indirectly for the most part through the aphides) from the vegetable kingdom, but those which are really carnivorous. These are numerous in temperate climates, and their usefulness to agriculture and sylviculture is incontestable. Thus the field ant is a great insect destroyer. A nest of this species is capable of destroying as many as 38 caterpillars and grasshoppers a minute, or 1,600 an hour, and such a colony is at work day and night during the pleasant season. In the arid plains of America the beneficent work of ants is revealed in the isles of verdure around their hills.

There are plants hospitable to ants, which furnish them shelter and often food, within the cavities of which the instincts of the ants prompt them to take their abode. This is the case with several ferns, among them the Polypodium nectariferum, the sterile fronds of which bear nectaries on their lower face and are, moreover, of a shape favorable to sheltering the insect.—Professor M. Heim in Popular Science Monthly.

Free Medical Advice.

A good story has been told by a family doctor regarding a little ruse adopted by one of his patients who wished to save the expense of consulting him.

The patient was a woman of good means, but of frugal disposition. One day she began to feel some alarm regarding her health, and, wishing to avoid a costly procedure, made an application to a life insurance company for a policy of large amount—so large, indeed, that they delegated three medical men to make an exhaustive examination of her before they could accept her as a risk.

In due time she was informed that her life had been accepted. She was thus in a position to assume that she was quite well, whereupon she replied to the company that she had changed her mind, and did not intend to take out a policy just then.—Pearson's Weekly.
